WHEN Mr Abdul Hamid Mohd topped up his mother-in-law's Medisave account 15 years ago, he also bought Basic MediShield coverage for her.

Such careful planning turned out to be an immense help for Mr Hamid, when his 67-year-old mother-in-law, Mdm Sumanah Kasbi, was admitted to Alexandra Hospital last year.

A diabetic who had no other serious health problems previously, Mdm Sumanah came down with breathing difficulties in September last year.

She was diagnosed with severe pneumonia, and was warded at a Class B2 ward for 55 days, of which 20 days were spent at the ICU.

"We were really taken aback by how her condition deteriorated so much in just a week," said Mr Hamid.

The hospital stay came up to $57,525.

Even after Government subsidy, Mdm Sumanah's bill was still a whopping $26,407. However, with MediShield and Medisave, the bill was reduced to $6,630. MediShield covered about 60 per cent of the bill.

"If I had to pay over $26,000 in cash, it would be extremely difficult. But with Medisave and MediShield, it was more manageable. I felt very relieved that I only had to pay over $6,000 in cash for my mother-in-law's hospital bill," said Mr Hamid.

A low cost medical insurance scheme, Basic MediShield provides patients and their families protection against large hospital bills. Primarily designed for Class B2 and C wards, MediShield can generally cover as much as 60 per cent of large bills for these wards.

co-payment will be reduced further.

To help older Singaporeans pay for their medical bills and any increase in MediShield premiums, the Government will also top up the Medisave accounts of those aged 51 and above by up to $450 this year.

Madam Sumanah's case also highlighted the need for one to take up a medical insurance plan as early as possible.

"Luckily, we had bought insurance for my mother-in-law then," said Mr Hamid. "It is good to be prepared. With MediShield, I feel there is no need to worry if any of us in the family have huge hospital bills in future."

"Now, I tell my friends who have older relatives to top up their Medisave and buy MediShield for them. This way, we won't need to worry if our relatives fall ill and need to be hospitalised."

Mdm Sumanah is now recovering well at home, and apart from regular medication, requires only dietary supervision.

Her story has an important message for all: It pays to protect oneself and our loved ones with medical insurance schemes that suit our different needs and budgets.

If you wish to stay in higher-class wards or private hospitals, you may want to choose Medisave-approved private integrated plans that offer higher coverage over and above Basic MediShield.

In choosing a plan, bear in mind that a patient can only claim up to the limit provided by the insurance plan, minus the deductible and co-insurance.
